

Transportation

- By airplane

In the summer, Corfu is a major tourist destination. As a result, there is a large number of low-cost charter flights from many European cities to its airport Ioannis Kapodistrias, which is located 2 km away from the capital of the island. Furthermore, there are frequent flights from the airport Eleftherios Venizelos at Athens. The duration of that flight is 50 minutes. Corfu is also connected with the city of Thessaloniki.

The national flag carrier OLYMPIC AIRLINES flies to Corfu three times a day with good connections to its international network, while Greek regional start-up airline AEGEAN flies twice a day.

Corfu is however well served from May through to October with charter flights from all major European charter airlines, offering good connections to most U.K., German, French, Belgian, Dutch, Swiss, Austrian, Scandinavian, and East European cities.

- By ferry

A more adventurous alternative route is with the ferry from Italy, but this requires additional traveling days. During the summer there is daily connection to Italy (Venice and Trieste) by ferry. Furthermore, from the town of Patras there are several itineraries for the island of Corfu, throughout the year. The duration of the journey is 7 hours. You can also visit the island of Corfu from Igoumenitsa (1 hour and 30 minutes).
